

GLAMOUR

FEBRUARY 2008

25 sex questions no one's ever asked men before

Our steamiest survey, p.184

Easy sexy hair

3-minute tricks for your exact length

12 DIRTY LITTLE SECRETS OF SUPPOSEDLY PERFECT WOMEN
Read 'em and relax!

Everything you want (and need) to know about guys!

Their bodies, their minds, their insecurities—plus the reason Kate Hudson and Matthew McConaughey would rather be friends than hook up

PROTECT YOURSELF!
THE 5 DAILY HABITS
THAT WILL SAVE YOUR LIFE

BONUS: What the First Lady wants you to know about your health

So, you want my job?

KRISTY CHOO, 38, AWARD-WINNING CHOCOLATIER AND OWNER OF JIN PATISSERIE IN VENICE, CALIF.

What her day is like:

I run the business and work in the kitchen, developing every recipe we use. That means I taste chocolates and cakes all day.

How she got started:

I used to be a flight attendant, and traveling the world was a way to experience new foods. That gave me the idea to go to baking school and become a chef.

Her secret success strategy:

My husband helps on the business side so I can put my energy toward designing everything from packaging to decor. I made enough in three years to pay off my start-up loan.

Her biggest money-makers:

For our best-selling candies, like dark chocolate caramel ganache lavender, we charge $2 a piece. It takes a few days to make just one—each has hand-cut decorations. —KRISTIN KOCH

